

ESCADATING

ESCALATOR SPEED DATING

+

What?

Dating shows have long been a source of raw comedy. From MTV's "Next" to the original "The Dating Game," viewers love the unfiltered opinions coming from real contestants.

Where?

While escalator rides can be long and awkward standing next to total strangers, the escalator at Hudson Yards 34th St. is a whopping 125 ft and 90 seconds to ride. It's the length of a perfect, NYC-themed speed date!

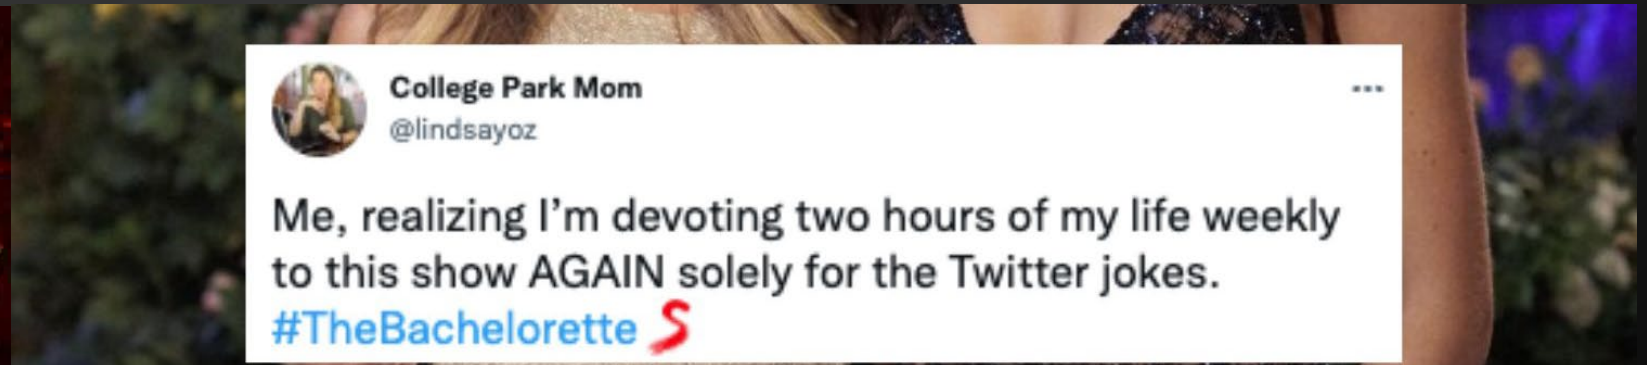

Who?

The humor of dating shows comes from finding real people attempting to make a good impression in a short amount of time. Paired with single comedians, after-the-date interviews, and a clever host (Andy Zou), Escadating is perfect for collecting shareable soundbites.

Why?

With low-lift production and a guerilla crew, it's an endlessly repeatable, evergreen format using local talent with high potential for engagement, as the fun of dating shows is judging people's decisions and opinions.

Sample Full-Length Episode

- 1. (0:15-0:30) Andy introduces the show.
- 2. (0:15-0:30) Intro to the episode's guest.
- 3. (2:00) Contestant 1 Intro, Date
- 4. (2:00) Contestant 2 Intro, Date
- 5. (2:00) Contestant 3 Intro, Date
- 6. (1:00-2:00) Guest reviews dates.

For Youtube, Facebook, Twitter, 7-9 minute episodes keep viewers engaged with quick segments over a runtime fitted for this longer-form platforms.

For Reels and TikTok, multiple sequential clips engages viewers to continue scrolling through our feed.

ESCADATING

Who can take it to the next level?